Ken Biermacher, a founding Director of the Firm, is the most senior member of the Litigation Section in the Dallas office.

His more than four decades long general trial, arbitration and appellate practice and experiences representing clients on both sides of the docket encompass the handling of a diverse range of complex commercial and business matters. These include partnership and employment matters, issues arising out of the operation of health care facilities, defense of class actions (relating to corporate securities, environmental, mass toxic tort, products and other claims), qui tam ("whistle blower") claims, complex real estate, general business and contractual matters, banking, corporate finance, intellectual property rights (patent and trademark infringement claims), manufacturing and oil patch matters. He also represents client interests involving director, officer and other fiduciary claims, fraud and corporate governance investigations, and controversies arising in estate, trust and probate proceedings.
