

Business Immigration Update in the Trump & AMLO Era – Recent Developments and Outlook

News, Events / September 16, 2019

James Prappas will moderate a panel presentation at the U.S.-Mexico Bar Association's upcoming annual conference. James' presentation will examine the new USMCA that will replace NAFTA. The panel will discuss U.S. and Mexican immigration issues and much more under the title "Business Immigration Update in the Trump & AMLO era – Recent Developments and Outlook". The conference is October 23-25, 2019 at Southern Methodist University Dedman School of Law.

ABOUT THE USMBA 2019 CONFERENCE

Electorates in both the United States and Mexico have elected presidents who ran on anti-elite messages and have disrupted the political class of both countries. One is from the left of the political spectrum and the other from the right. They both have begun leaving their mark on legislation and the practice of law. Come join us to discuss how these events have impacted the practice of law in North America. We will feature expert panels with top lawyers, the judiciary, and academics from both Mexico and the U.S. Additionally, our program will include special sessions for you to network with colleagues at round tables.
